

WORLD BOOK

Thank you!

This time of year brings flowers, sun, and laughter in the (virtual) classroom and at home. This May is a little different than past school years- educators are teaching from afar, and many parents have stepped into teaching roles. Both are challenging tasks, and we thank you for it.

In this month's World Book Wired, we celebrate you and all that you're doing to keep your kids engaged and learning at home amid all of this uncertainty!

AT-HOME ACTIVITIES

TREAT YOURSELF!

Our caramel corn recipe is not only easy to make, but also a great opportunity to teach kids about science and math.

DIY BATH BOMBS

These bath bombs are a fun experiment for kids (and you). Have fun making them and watching them fizz around in the bath.

RELAX

Remember that what you are doing is hard and at some points draining. Take time for yourself and relax. You deserve it!

Get the most out of your digital subscription! We offer a variety of webinars to provide time-saving tips that can immediately be put to use. This month, learn how to leverage our resources to break up the day and support learning at home.
